> GRANT AND THE PENNSYLVANIA CONVENTION.

The Options of the Press On I. Expediency and Besuits.

IT DISAPPOINTS GRANT'S FRIENDS. New York Tribune (Rep.): This result must be a severe disappointment to the friends of General Grant, and a hard blow to the movement for his nomination. This narrow majority of twenty was obtained only by strenu-ous exertions and the use of powerful influence. No one can doubt that if the Convention had been left to its own spontaneous choice the Pennsylvania delegation would stand at this moment for James G. Bistos. But this is not all. The majority for Grant, small as it is, is enquestionably due in part to the firm refusal of Mr. Blaine's immediate representatives to authorize any bitter assault upon Senator Cameron. In view of all these things, it may be well doubted whether, in voting as they have been instructed to vote, the Pennsylvania delegation will fairly represent Penn-sylvania sentiment. But, however this may be, one thing is clear—the claim that there is is an overwhelming demand among the Republican masses
